History and its curriculum offer context & insight as to why things are the way they presently exist. To know the history of something, someone, or some place is to understand its essence, and it informs the appropriate approach to achieving a desired outcome. In a more technical sense, my history curriculum at ECU required me to write papers and exams, which were usually essay exams. I didn't know this at the time, but those history papers and blue book exams were preparing me for success in law school and my legal practice.
